

GLADSTONE GALLERY

Anna Daneri, "Joan Jonas: Invisible Miracles," L'Officiel Art, Spring, 2019

L'OFFICIEL ART

Joan Jonas Invisible Miracles

by Anna Daneri

GLADSTONE GALLERY

For Ocean Space, a new cross-disciplinary platform initiated by TBA21-Academy and located in the Venetian Church of San Lorenzo, pioneering performance and video artist Joan Jonas (b. 1936, New York) has produced a new performance and multimedia installation, titled Moving Off the Land II. Beginning with this latest project to then go back to earlier works, such as the US Pavilion for the 2015 Venice Biennale, Anna Daneri delves into the inspiring and multi-faceted practice of the American artist.

"JOAN JONAS: MOVING OFF THE LAND II," OCEAN SPACE, CHURCH OF SAN LORENZO, VENICE.
THROUGH SEPTEMBER 29.

Joan Jonas, Mirror Check, 1970; performed as part of Organic Honey's Vertical Roll, 1972, Ace Gallery, Venice, California, 1972. Photo: Roberta Neiman. Courtesy: the artist.

GLADSTONE GALLERY

Joan Jonas, Mirror Piece I, 1969; Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York, 1969. Photo: Joan Jonas. Courtesy: the artist.

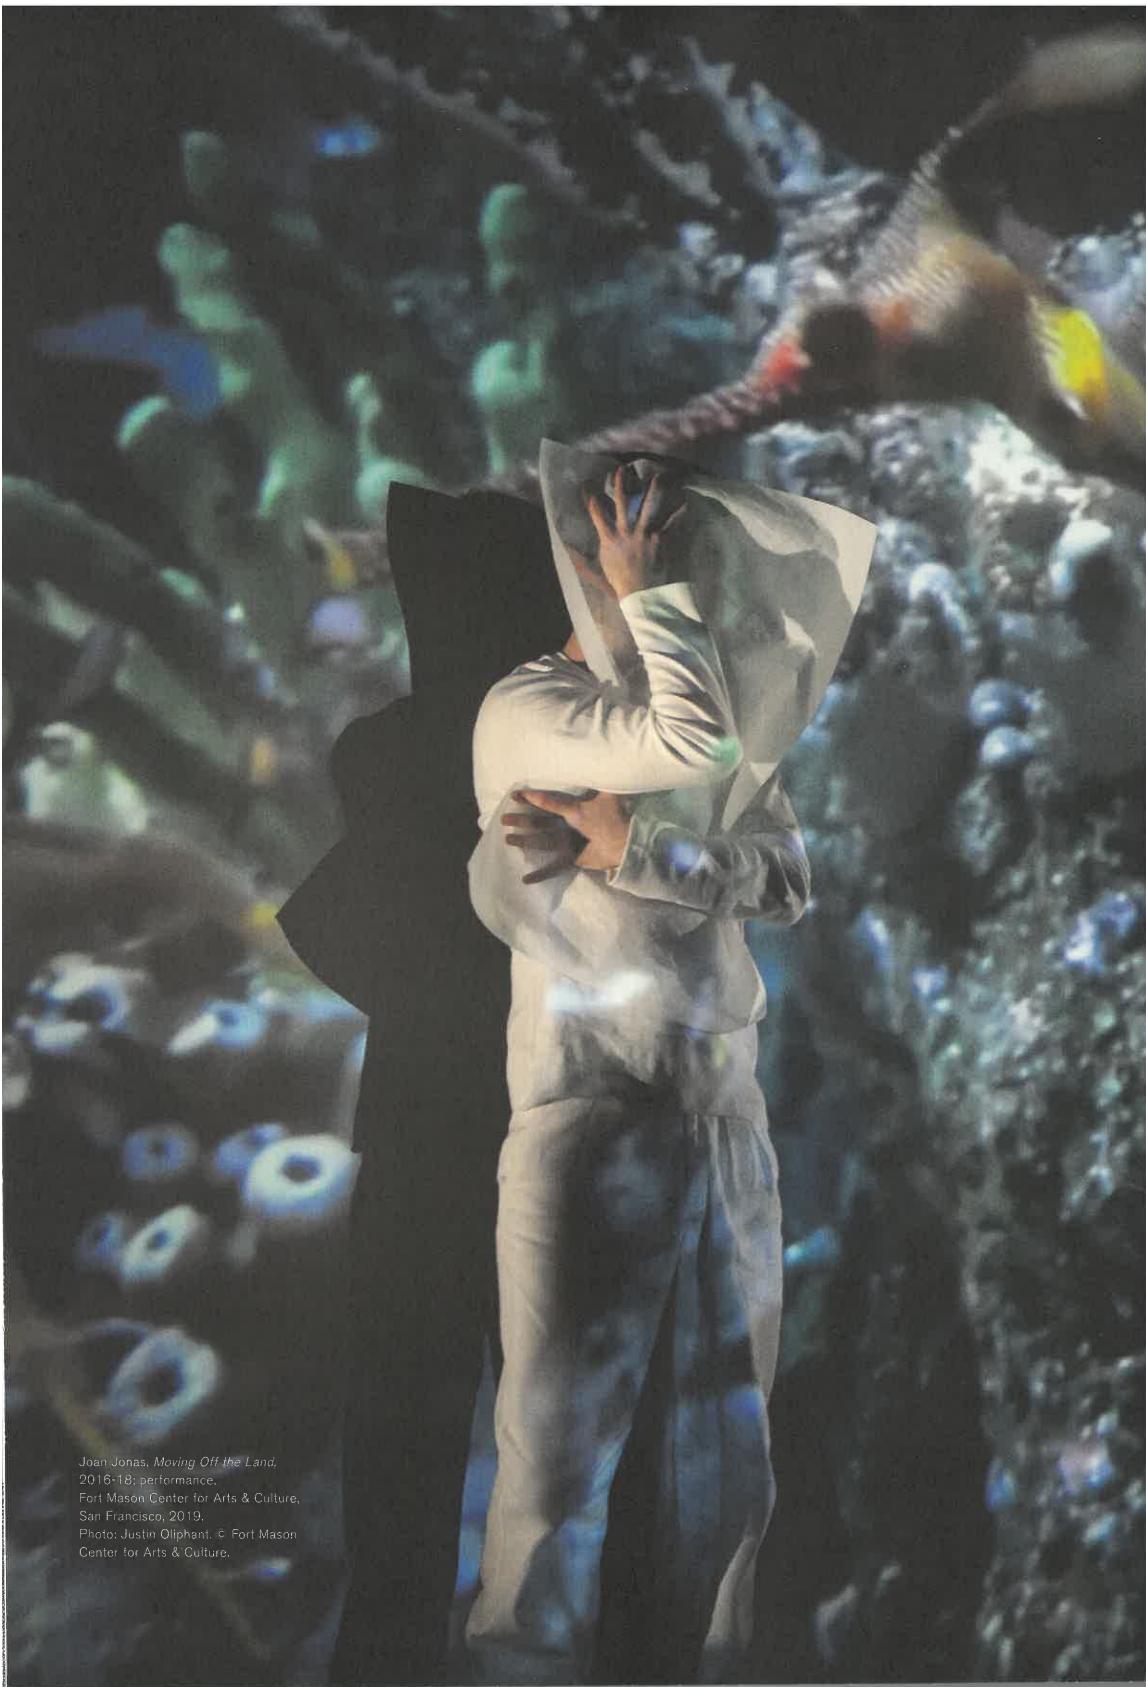

GLADSTONE GALLERY

Perhaps of the sea, fish, and aquarists came to the top of the world's oceans of the last century. Following a thin blue line that connects them from the sea, its sound, and the Great Lakes to the beach of Long Island or Nova Scotia, the great fishing ports of the world have been the scene of some of the greatest battles in history. The animals — repre-

2008: A book found in meagre of strange
Australian terms lying in the deepest parts of the sea [..]. Action: Archaeology of the Deep Sea [..].
2010: First version of the Deep Sea [..].
2011: A wide performance piece of the Deep Sea [..].
2012: Journey to the first glaciars are melting in San Dilego, California [..].
2012: Journey to the first glaciars are melting in San Dilego, California [..].
2013: Performance of the Deep Sea [..].
2013: Performance of the Deep Sea [..].

It's time to look back at the 8th iteration of the Koch-Muzinski Seminar, held during 2016. At this time the TB2A Seminar was held in Lviv, Ukraine. The TB2A Project has been running since 2017, the TB2A Seminar in Lviv in 2017, the TB2A Seminar in Kyiv in 2018, and the TB2A Seminar in Rejkjavik and Seogwipo in 2019. In London in 2019, after the presentation of the Forties Year, the TB2A Seminar was held in New York in 2018, after the presentation of the Forties Year, and the TB2A Seminar in Valencia in 2017, the TB2A Seminar in Agde in 2016, and the TB2A Seminar in San Francisco in 2015. The work on new methods of research on the oceans and "collaborative platforms for change" opened by TB2A will continue with an installation of the same title in 2021.

GLADSTONE GALLERY

Joan Jonas, Moving Off the Land,
2016-18; performance,
Fort Mason Center for Arts & Culture,
San Francisco, 2019.
Photo: Justin Oliphant, © Fort Mason
Center for Arts & Culture.

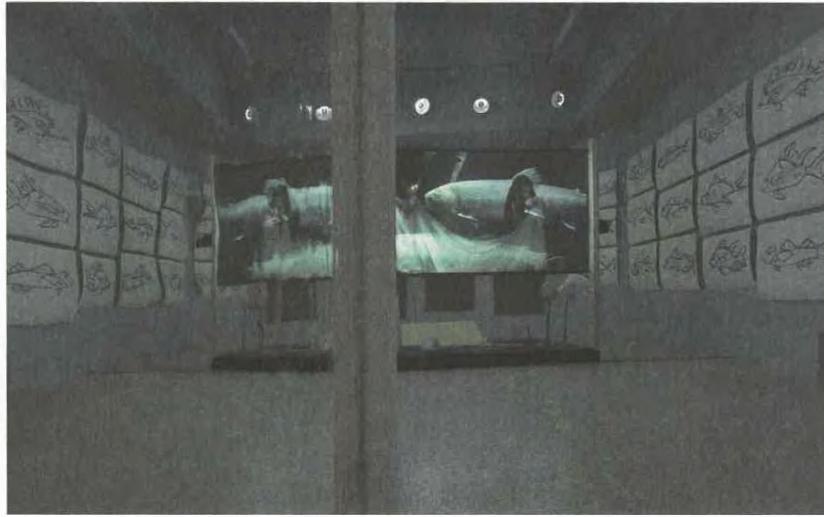

GLADSTONE GALLERY

GLADSTONE GALLERY

L'OFFICIEL ART

N°29

Above: Joan Jonas, They Come to Us without a Word, 2015; installation view, US Pavilion, 56th Venice Biennale, 2015. Photo: Moira Ricci. Courtesy: the artist. Right page: Joan Jonas, Reanimation, 2010/2012/2013; mixed-media installation; dimensions variable; installation view, Tate Modern, 2018. Photo: Seraphina Neville. © Tate photography and the artist.

of forms, also with very marked undulations, which were finished as mirrors and placed on view in the "Home Room." For the "Mirror Room" the choice went instead to industrially produced glass with a slightly undulated surface, again mirror-finished by hand, which covered the surface of the room, producing an infinite play of reflections augmented by the presence of a chandelier of salvaged crystal drops at the center, in a wide range of forms, hanging from an iron structure designed by the artist and crossed in turn by a video projection. Discussing the role of mirrors in her practice, Jonas states:

One of the underlying concerns of my work is the perception of space, and I work with various devices, such as the mirror, to alter the audience's experience of a space. My "Mirror Pieces" (1968-71) were performed in large indoor rooms – such as gyms, auditoriums, and lofts – and once outdoors. [...] Today I use different mirrors – concave and convex – because they reflect and distort the image and change the space. Often instead of using special effects in video, I use the mirrors to create magical worlds, one step more removed. My camera, pointing at the mirror, records my gaze as I look indirectly into the lens reflected in the mirror.⁵

The mirror finishing is itself an alchemical process, and I believe that for Joan Jonas being present during the operation constituted an important moment. The procedure is similar to that of photographic printing: the surface of the glass is immersed in vats with a mixture of chemicals, and the glass is transformed, gradually revealing the image, like the image that emerges through the passage in developing trays.

It is magical – the mirror is like a camera that records the data of the visible and restores them to the gaze with the variations caused by its surface. A game of rebounds of gazes (and images) that has been the basis of artistic representation since its origins, and whose history continues to nurture the work of Jonas. "As I developed a piece, the important thing was to sit and stare at a space as if I were looking at a painting. In studying art history I traced the history of painting for instance, which fascinated me, in relation to representation of space."⁶

A new production of mirrors is also central to the large installation Moving Off the Land II (2019), created for the spaces in Venice of TBA21, curated by Stefanie Hessler. Their surface suggests the ripples on the lagoon, and reflects the interiors of the church of San Lorenzo, one of the few churches in Italy with a bifrontal altar, built at the end of the 16th century by Simone Sorella and previously closed for many years. All the elements of the installation are thus implicated in the game of reflections: large suspended canvases that reproduce some of the red drawings made during the performances; rows of drawings on paper of fish that make reference to the under-sea creatures in the videos by Gruber; and, of course, the videos, projected in specially designed spaces that remind us of the "My New Theater" series of cinema-sculptures for domestic viewing, which take on an environmental scale, in this case. In the exhibition, as in the performance, Joan Jonas constructs reflections in images and texts on the state of the oceans and our possible relationship with the beings that live inside them, another part – as we have seen – of a research project spanning many years, in search of invisible miracles.

Anna Daneri is an independent curator based in Genoa.

1 - Anna Daneri and Caterina Riva (ed.), Invisible Miracles. XIII Advanced Course in Visual Arts of the Fondazione Ratti, Mousse, 2008, p.1.

2 - Frances Richard and Anthony Huberman (ed.), Joan Jonas is on our mind, CCA Wattis Institute for Contemporary Arts, 2017.

3 - Joan Jonas, "Notes on Process" in: Jane Farver (ed.), Joan Jonas. They Come to Us Without a Word, MIT List Visual Arts Center, Gregory R. Miller & Co. & Hatje Cantz, 2015, p.15 and 17. After Venice, the piece has been shown in 2016 at NTU Center for Contemporary Art Singapore and DHC/ART Montreal. In 2019 Fort Mason Center for Arts & Culture presented the installation with the support of the Kramlich Collection.

4 - Ingrid Schaffner, "Conversation with Joan Jonas," in: ibidem, p.116 and 131.

5 - Joan Jonas, "Mirrors" in: Joan Simon (ed.), In the Shadow of the Shadow: The Work of Joan Jonas, HangarBicocca and Malmö Konsthall, Gregory R. Miller & Co. & Hatje Cantz, 2015, p.40.

6 - Joan Jonas, "Space, Movement, Time" in: Anna Daneri and Cristina Natalicchio (ed.), Joan Jonas, Fondazione Antonio Ratti and Galleria Civica di Arte Contemporanea di Trento, Charta, 2007, p.48.

GLADSTONE GALLERY

